Beth Israel Hospital NEWS

FEBRUARY 1981

Phyllis D. Giller, BI

Dr. Eugene Braunwald, physician-in-chief, presented the principal address.

"Strength" Theme of Sixty-Fifth Annual Meeting

"Yesterday and Tomorrow: From Strength to Strength" was the theme of Beth Israel Hospital's 65th Annual Meeting and Brunch. Nearly 600 people, including members of the hospital staff and friends from the community, attended the event held Sunday, November 16 at the Marriott Motor Hotel in Newton. The annual meeting allows the hospital to inform its supporters of the major accomplishments of the past year and plans for the future.

The theme of the annual meeting reflected Beth Israel's continuing mission to provide, as the program stated, "excellence in patient care that is rooted in tradition and nourished by innovation." The meeting paid tribute to Beth Israel's past by honoring those who have brought Beth Israel to its current position and looked ahead to the challenges that will face the hospital in the next decade.

Eliot Snider, chairman of the meeting and first vice chairman of the board of trustees, explained the source of the hospital's strength in his opening remarks: "It is all of the trustees who have made the welfare of the hospital and its patients a major mission in their lives. It is generations of doctors, nurses, administrators, and all employees who have served our patients so well. It is the men, women, and young and old people who have volunteered their time and their talent for the hospital. It is the hundreds of thousands of patients who have been cared for at Beth Israel. It is all of you here today."

Annual Report Issue 1980

Highlights Of 1980

- Eugene Braunwald, MD, was named physician-in-chief of the consolidated departments of medicine at Beth Israel Hospital and Brigham and Women's Hospital

- Beth Israel, Children's Hospital Medical Center, and Brigham and Women's Hospital formed the Longwood Area Joint Trauma Center. The center is one of three in greater Boston.

- Construction began on the Charles A. Dana Research Building, a major new research facility which will provide space for the Harvard-Thorndike Laboratories and other medical research at Beth Israel.

- New services offered included the:

– Sleep Unit

– Comprehensive Epilepsy Center

– Geriatric Consulting Service

– Back Pain School

- The Women's Auxiliary sponsored Fall Fashion Fantasy in October, a highly successful fashion show and luncheon. The Auxiliary raised $180,000 this year toward purchase of a CT-Scanner for which the hospital received a certificate of need in October.

- Major advances in medical research were published by Beth Israel staff members:

– Abnormalities in DES-exposed women were found to disappear spontaneously.

– Obesity was linked to an enzyme defect.

– A potential treatment for sickle-cell anemia was reported.

– Anatomic brain differences were linked to dyslexia.

– New insights were developed into the cause and treatment of some cases of sexual impotence.

– A new system of delivering medical care to inner city residents proved feasible.

– An anti-ulcer mechanism was explained.

– Stress ulcers in seriously ill patients were reduced.

- The Administrative staff was reorganized with Dr. Mitchell T. Rabkin assuming the title of president of the hospital, David Dolins becoming executive vice president and director, Rodger L. Daniels, vice president for financial planning and management, Joyce C. Clifford, RN, MSN, vice president for nursing, and Sandra L. Fenwick and Richard S. Luskin, associate directors.

- Facilities were improved, with dedications including the:

– Grossman Conference Center of Kirstein Hall

– Rabb Psychiatric Unit

- Progress was made toward remodeling the Labor and Delivery Suite with funds raised in honor of Dr. Harold H. Rosenfield.

- A Russian translator joined the staff to meet the needs of Russian patients. The hospital expanded services through in-service staff education and special programs such as cooking classes for Russian patients.

- The community discussion series on women's health entered its third year after receiving the first-place MacEachern Award, recognition from the Academy of Hospital Public Relations.

- Anne V. Cronin retired in October as director of personnel services after more than 15 years. Laura Avakian became the director of human resources, a new title which reflects the growing complexity and sophistication of personnel administration. □

Managing back pain. Dr. Augustus A. White, III, orthopedic surgeon-in-chief, speaks to students enrolled in the Back Pain School he established in June. Modelled after similar schools in Sweden, the school has been shown to be effective in helping back pain sufferers return to normal activities faster.

New system of care. The Urban Medical Group, affiliated with Beth Israel, has pioneered a system of providing personal, economical, and quality care for medically-underserved residents of the inner city. In a study published in The New England Journal of Medicine, the Group presented evidence that nonphysician providers can handle 90 per cent of the patients' needs in Home Care programs and nursing homes without compromising quality, as one aspect of the system. Dr. Roger Mark, above, checks a nursing home patient during his weekly rounds with nurse practitioner Flo Calori, who monitors the daily care.

Geriatric consultation service. Liebe Kravitz, right, the social worker in the geriatric consultation service, discusses a problem with nurse Mary Rockwood-Lane. The new service, which includes physicians and nurses specializing in geriatrics, was established to improve the care of hospitalized elderly patients.

Excerpts from Remarks by Eugene Braunwald, MD Beth Israel Annual Meeting November 16, 1980

Beth Israel's Present and Future Course Follow From Past

As most of you know, the Beth Israel Hospital was founded in 1915 to care for immigrant Jews who were unfamiliar with the language and customs in the Boston area and who were not always made to feel welcome in other hospitals. They were often terrified of being hospitalized and were not able to observe their dietary and other customs. This fear made them refuse, in many instances, to seek medical attention. Thus, the hospital was founded with the appreciation that a hospitalized patient must not only be made physically comfortable, but must also be placed at ease emotionally, as part of his therapy.

Kindliness, sympathy, compassion, and understanding have been an integral part of patient care at the Beth Israel Hospital since 1915. Although the nature of the patients which the hospital serves has changed over the years, the human aspects of the hospital's character are as important today as they were 65 years ago, and they must continue to be nurtured in the future. The concerns that most patients feel when they are admitted to a hospital, their fear of the unknown, their realization of their own mortality, are concerns to which we must be continually sensitive. The Beth Israel Hospital has stressed these sensitivities, and this attitude which pervades the institution provides us with an extraordinary opportunity to train young physicians in an environment which does not exist in many hospitals.

The second purpose of the founding of this hospital was to provide an opportunity for Jewish physicians to practice and for young Jewish doctors to train, an opportunity which was not present in many institutions in 1915. This particular need has been lessened to a large extent, I believe, by the very existence of Beth Israel Hospital.

Very early in the history of the hospital, Dr. Isadore Bronfin called attention to another issue which became woven into the fabric of the institution. He appreciated that the quality of care depended primarily on the quality of the medical staff, which in turn depended on the hospital's role in teaching and therefore on its affiliation with a medical school. Although these concepts are obvious today, they were not so in 1918, and there were many opponents of this notion of affiliation with a medical school, just as there had been vigorous opponents of the idea of actually establishing the hospital a few years earlier. The arguments for and against establishing a medical school affiliation found their expression in the discussion about the proposed move of the hospital from Townsend Street to Brookline Avenue.

The wisdom of the trustees in the early 1920's is readily apparent today when we use a marvelous instrument called the "retrospectoscope." Their wisdom is reflected not only in the high quality of care delivered to the hundreds of thousands of patients who have been hospitalized at Beth Israel Hospital over the years, but also in the hospital's contribution to a much larger number of patients through the training of thousands of Harvard medical students, of interns and residents, and in contributions to the body of medical knowledge through the conduct of outstanding research programs by members of its professional staff. The hospital could not have made its important contributions to all three areas—quality patient care, teaching, and research—without the Harvard affiliation. However, with the move to Brookline Avenue and the affiliation came the era of specialization, reflecting the scientific revolution which has affected all of medicine.

Future directions. What are the tasks for Beth Israel in the future? The first deals with patient care. One of the problems with specialization is the fragmentation of patient care, and the public has become suspicious of the stereotyped picture of the impersonal scientist-specialist. With the emphasis on specialized care, the patient's problems have been dissected apart, sometimes along the lines of organ systems. They now have to be put back together again. My distinguished predecessors have made a great deal of progress in this task, with the development of a strong unit of primary care; a close affiliation with a health maintenance organization, the Harvard Community Health Plan; the presence of an outstanding division of geriatrics; with the development of strong links between Beth Israel and the various community institutions concerned with the care of the aged; and the development of units such as clinical pharmacology and computer medicine. These efforts look at the patient, not from the point of view of each individual system—the heart, the kidney, the lungs, etc.—but rather with a more global perspective. These approaches should be strengthened and other similar efforts developed without losing the leadership that the hospital has developed in specialized patient care.

I also believe that it is very important that we re-examine the relationship between physicians and other health professionals. Obviously the doctor can't do the job alone. We were reminded a week ago by Dr. Samuel Proger that there are now at least 140 separate health professions and that physicians constitute only four per cent of all health professionals. The quality of the nonphysician health care personnel is vital to quality patient care and fortunately it is very strong at the Beth Israel Hospital—stronger than I have seen in almost any institution, in Boston or elsewhere. However, much as I believe in the team concept of medical care, I feel strongly that the physician must be clearly identified as the captain of the team, and cannot shed the ultimate responsibility for the care of the patient. I think it is important that our medical students and house staff appreciate this role while learning to work harmoniously with other health professionals.

Perhaps the most critical challenge for the Beth Israel, indeed for any teaching hospital in this country, is to maintain the highest quality of patient care, training, and research at a time when resources are reduced but opportunity for advances in medicine are extraordinarily bright. The "new biology" which is emerging can exert an enormous impact on every aspect of patient care in the next few years and we must find the means to marshall its powerful tools, despite the drying up of traditional sources of support. The budget of the National Institutes of Health will be reduced or at best will be held more or less constant while its buying power is eroded by inflation. This morning's New York Times features an article about the sweeping changes in reimbursement which the Reagan transition team is now considering. These are bound to have an adverse effect on the resources available to teaching hospitals to carry out their complex missions.

What are the possible solutions? One which has been proposed is that academic medicine increase its contacts with industry. These contacts have flourished in Europe and have redounded to the benefit of both partners. But the potential conflict of interest is great. Just three weeks ago Dr. Arnold Relman, editor of the New England Journal of Medicine, wrote an important article about the hazards to society of the so-called "medical/industrial complex" and it is clear that if we proceed in this direction we must do so very cautiously.

Cooperation urged. The development of more cordial and intense relationships between Beth Israel and the other Harvard hospitals in the Longwood Avenue area should prove to be helpful in meeting our increased needs at a time of dwindling resources. It is essential that long-range planning between these institutions go on at a much more active level than before. Each hospital can't do everything; no matter how great each institution may be individually, it will not be able to offer that broad array of services to which our patients are entitled or the intense and diverse training which our students require.

One original reason for the Beth Israel's move from Townsend Street to Brookline Avenue was the availability of consultants in other area hospitals. There are some examples where this has been conspicuously successful. For example, the Joint Center for Radiation Therapy, under Dr. Samuel Hellman's leadership, stands out. But in many other areas there have been petty rivalries and hospital chauvinism. This chauvinism

Move to Brookline Avenue. Top: Dedication ceremonies were held in 1928 at the new Beth Israel Hospital on Brookline Avenue. The site was chosen, in part, because the recognition that the quality of the medical staff, teaching, and research depended on affiliation with a medical school. When it opened at its current location, Beth Israel affiliated with Harvard Medical School, near the hospital. A major purpose of Beth Israel was to provide an opportunity for Jewish physicians to practice and for young Jewish doctors to train, since these were not present in many institutions at the time.

Team work. *Bottom: In Beth Israel's Ambulatory Care Center (BIAC), health care teams work together to provide comprehensive primary care. is usually presented under the guise of maintaining hospital identity, despite the fact that its effects may not be in the best interests of our patients and trainees. I have wondered for some years whether it will be possible to continue to convince the NIH to support three excellent training programs in hematology within a radius of 200 yards and whether it will be possible to continue to sustain five independent renal transplant programs within a four-block area.

I think that at Beth Israel we have the opportunity to work closely with Harvard Medical School and with our sister hospitals to forge important new relationships which will benefit both the local and larger national communities which we serve. Dr. Robert Petersdorf, my predecessor at this podium a year ago, Dr. Mitchell Rabkin, and Dean Tosteson have played catalytic roles in bringing about some of these new relationships. The creation of a joint department of medicine and of a joint trauma center during the past year are just two expressions of this new spirit of cooperation.

Another challenge for us is cost-containment. We can contribute to this effort only if we examine our own practices in a rational, objective, and dispassionate way. I think that the new medical technology, of which we are justifiably proud, has up to now only increased the cost of medical care. The challenge in the next few years will be to try to turn this around. We are in a unique position to do so by working with colleagues at the Harvard School of Public Health.

Deregulation is a "buzz" word that has been heard with increasing frequency the past few months, even before the presidential election. It is popular these days to blame government regulation for most of the ills that have befallen our society. But those of us who are interested in patient care should remember that some of the greatest advances in health have come about from government regulations. The regulation of the quality of water and milk supplies and the 55 mile-per-hour speed limit have had very tangible and beneficial effects on health. We ought not simply to jump on the deregulation bandwagon, even though it is often frustrating to deal with the regulatory agencies which have complicated our lives.

Although I don't think that there is a simple formula for dealing with the complex problems that face voluntary university-affiliated hospitals such as the Beth Israel, I believe that it would be useful to get back to the fundamental purposes of our hospital. First and foremost, the hospital must be an advocate for the patients within its walls. While we want patient care, research, and training to live harmoniously together, in the rare instances when these needs clash, patient care must be given the highest priority. After all, what could one possibly teach in a hospital if the quality of patient care is not the highest priority? When there is direct competition between societal needs, particularly in relation to the costs of medical care and the needs of an individual patient, again the hospital must be the individual patient's advocate. In the rare instances when there is competition between the needs of the patients who are in the hospital and that much larger community of patients who will be cared for by our trainees in the future or who will be the beneficiaries of our research efforts, again the higher priority must be given to the patients who actually come into the Beth Israel. They come to us with a trust that must not be betrayed under any circumstances.

Controversial decisions. The community and the trustees, whose responsibility it is to speak for the community, have made many controversial decisions in the history of the Beth Israel. The first, and most fundamental of course, dealt with the establishment of the hospital. There were many persons who were opposed to this act and who were concerned about a backlash. The second one had to do with the move to Brookline Avenue and the affiliation with the Harvard Medical School. Again, there were many who were concerned that this would have a negative effect on the hospital. The decision of the trustees to appoint me as physician-in-chief was also, as I am well aware, a controversial decision, though of less significance. Regardless of external appearances, this decision was not really a break with tradition. I interpret it as an expression by the trustees to maintain the identity of the hospital and its concern for compassionate patient care, but a concern that is coupled with the conviction that the best patient care can be delivered by working with the Harvard Medical School and with other Harvard-affiliated institutions.

I am deeply grateful for the warmth and the graciousness with which I have been received into the Beth Israel family. I have never been privileged to work with a more enlightened, supportive, understanding, and sympathetic board of trustees, nor a more effective hospital administration. At the same time I must express deep appreciation to the trustees and the administration of the Brigham and Women's Hospital, who have been most cooperative in furthering the opportunity for the consolidation of these two departments of medicine. The problems which face all of us in academic medicine are difficult ones, but I am confident that at the Beth Israel Hospital, indeed in the Harvard hospitals, we are in about as good a position to solve these problems as is any institution in the country. □

A Year of Change

Referring to the fruits of observation in science, Louis Pasteur is quoted as saying "...chance favors only the mind that is prepared." The observation is valid for progress in general: it seems favored by the coexistence of chance or opportunity with a mindset ready to capture the advantages of change. If our institutional odyssey from strength to strength is measured in the currency of change, this has been a remarkable year.

The most dramatic change was the consolidation of the departments of medicine of Beth Israel Hospital and Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, now a part of the Brigham and Women's Hospital. Emerging out of the coincidence of independent strategic planning ideas at the two institutions, the consolidation will probably do more to strengthen the individual and special character of each hospital than any other development in the balance of this century. Dr. Eugene Braunwald is to be congratulated for entering an uncharted sea and rapidly earning widespread admiration and appreciation for the course he has set. We also applaud Dr. Stephen H. Robinson, appointed clinical director of the department under Dr. Braunwald, and Dr. Steven Come, assistant clinical director.

There has been a major change in our administrative structure, with definition of the new roles of president, executive vice president, and vice president for financial planning and management, carried out by me, David Dolins, and Rodger Daniels, respectively. We recognized the need for intensification of each performance: financial planning in an environment of growing restriction, operating in an arena of burgeoning complexity, and overall strategic planning better to fulfill our goals as a major Harvard teaching hospital, as a source of comfort and clinical capability to the general community, and as the central resource of our own Jewish community on matters of health. There were other related changes, the promotions of Sandra Fenwick and Richard Luskin to associate director, and the title changes of the Board of Trustees, the former president becoming chairman of the Board. Anne Cronin has retired after fifteen years of exceptional service as director of personnel. Happily, she is replaced by Laura Avakian, coming to BI from Cleveland. We took this opportunity to rename personnel as the division of human resources, both to reflect the growing complexity of personnel administration and to underscore our shared appreciation that the quality of worklife at this hospital surely helps to determine the quality of its patient care.

Michael Lutch

Antiviral drugs. Clyde Crumpacker, MD, directed the clinical trial at Beth Israel of a new antiviral drug, acyclovir. The research is part of the effort to find effective drugs to treat virus infections comparable to the use of antibiotics for bacterial infections.

As for patient care—more patients this year than ever before—inpatient, ambulatory, emergency—shorter stays, more intense efforts day-to-day. Yet the warmth and personalization are as strong as ever, thanks in no small way to primary nursing and to the widespread realization that at Beth Israel, regardless of our individual tasks, we are all patient advocates.

New clinical developments include a hematology/oncology ambulatory unit particularly geared for the patient who must return repeatedly for chemotherapy; a unit for the treatment of epilepsy; a geriatrics consultation service; and a center for the study of sleep disorders which is, incidentally, an example of the growing frequency where clinical interests are shared by several specialties, in this instance, neurology and pulmonary medicine.

Sharing among institutions is illustrated by the teamwork developed at Children's Hospital Medical Center, Brigham and Women's Hospital, and Beth Israel Hospital to allow our designation collectively as a Trauma Center, one of only three in the area for the emergency reception of trauma patients in the most extreme need.

Intertwined with service is scholarship—teaching and research. The year includes discovery of a biochemical link to obesity; a genetic marker related to one kind of kidney cancer; understandings on the neuroanatomic basis of childhood dyslexia; insights into the endocrine function of the brain; fundamental studies on the herpes virus; a sober evaluation of the latest in drug treatment for ulcers; hopeful news on some of the sequels of DES therapy; gains in the treatment of impotence; and a new approach to the prevention and treatment of the crises in sickle cell disease. Incidentally, that sickle cell study is an example of one of the fruits of our consolidation in medicine—the collaboration of Dr. Robert Rosa at BI and Dr. Franklin Bunn at the Brigham and Women's to create an effort greater collectively than the sum of its parts.

New facilities planned. Biomedical research requires space, and we have been crowded ever since the Harvard-Thorndike Laboratory moved here from Boston City Hospital seven years ago. Thanks to generous grants from the Charles A. Dana Foundation, the Kresge Foundation, the Permanent Charity Fund, and other donors, we are now able to establish the Charles A. Dana Research Institute and to build the Charles A. Dana Research Building, four floors of new research laboratories atop the Slosberg-Landay Building and adjacent to the Sherman Building.

We have moved ahead on this structure for research because the Determination of Need process has been much simpler than that for clinical facilities we also plan. But make no mistake about our interest in clinical improvements. Under the title, "THE PROJECT," we seek to enlarge the Berenson Emergency Unit, the Morse Medical Intensive Care Unit, and radiation therapy through a new building extending out from the present emergency unit structure. It is currently known as the Northeast Building—until the naming opportunity is secured by a generous donor. Labor and delivery will move to a new tower atop the Feldberg Building, also to house new respiratory, surgical, and other intensive care beds, plus medical-surgical beds to begin replacing those in the half-century-old Gryzmish Building. This is the West Tower, also available for more personalized designation. We apply for the Determination of Need next month and hope for approval to lead to construction as early as Spring 1982.

Contemplations over construction lead one down Brookline Avenue to MATEP, the Medical Area Total Energy Plant. The rate structure, a reasonable one, is a direct result of negotiations with Harvard by a trustee from each of three hospitals—New England Deaconess, Brigham and Women's, and from the BI, Norman Leventhal. Gerald Gillerman, Beth Israel counsel, played a major part as well. In that instance, the several hospitals and the Medical School put their heads together to meet a problem already looming large overhead. The same institutions, under the flag of the Harvard Medical Center and MASCO, a conjoined service and planning arm of the institutions, have begun to develop an area-wide planning overview looking at programs first with principles of physical planning to follow. We can be proud that Dr. Daniel Tosteson, dean of Harvard Medical School, has asked Stanley Feldberg to head the multihospital trustee group to oversee that important effort.

So there is an excitement in the air, and a fresh look about us—from the new BI logo to the ventures in service and scholarship underway and in planning. The thrust is not for change per se but for achievement, for the attainment of long-standing goals and the honoring of continuing obligations. Years ago we served our community as a welcoming resource for care and for training. There was no question that Beth Israel belonged. Today that community has grown in many ways, and the manner of our service has evolved as well. We look back through the archives to remind ourselves of yesterday's strengths. We move forward with today's opportunities to reach those strengths tomorrow that reaffirm our linkage with the past. It has been a year of change, a year of chance, and, we hope, of prepared minds, and of favor. □

Sleep unit. Dr. Michael Biber examines results from an overnight sleep study which recorded a patient's brain waves, eye and limb movements, oxygen saturation of blood, muscle tone, and breathing patterns. Opened in January, 1980, the Sleep Unit treats patients with potentially life-threatening disorders such as sleep apnea and narcolepsy.

Lucy Cobos

Personal care. The renovated hematology/oncology unit has expanded services to patients with tumors and blood diseases. Each patient in the outpatient unit is assigned a primary nurse to provide all the nursing care. Nurse Barbara Farley, above, is shown with a patient who has completed treatment.

Beth Israel Hospital

New look. A new logo and design system was instituted during the year for hospital publications and stationery. The system creates a consistent, more contemporary image for the hospital and makes available an orderly, time-saving approach to producing new printed materials.

Excerpts from Remarks by Norman B. Leventhal Beth Israel Annual Meeting November 16, 1980

Hospital's Ties to Community Are Strong

Today, we find Beth Israel Hospital in a position that should make all of us proud.

- Our financial picture is sound. The momentum initiated by my predecessor, Stanley Feldberg, to improve the bottom line has brought us very near to the breakeven point.

- Our plans for the next great building phase are solidified.

- The trustee decision to join with Brigham and Women's Hospital and Harvard Medical School in establishing a consolidated department of medicine is behind us, and under Dr. Rabkin's and Dr. Braunwald's leadership, Beth Israel is growing in stature as a leader in patient care, research, and teaching.

- Our hospital's reputation continues to expand on the extraordinary quality of personal care at Beth Israel.

There is one other aspect of Beth Israel that I have not mentioned—a quality that is not quite as clearly definable as a bottom line or a building program—yet one that comes closer to the heart of the hospital than even these important matters.

If you have looked at your program cover for today's meeting, you will notice that the central design is based on Hebrew lettering. The word on the cover is "chail," and it means "strength." It is part of the expression you see in full both in Hebrew and in English in the program—"m'chail al chail"—"from strength to strength."

This marvelous phrase can be seen several ways. It suggests the strength of our history linked with the strength of our future. It also brings to mind the strong links in a chain of leadership that has been with us from the beginning.

But there is another meaning to that phrase that I would like to call to your attention. The strength of the hospital is inseparable from the strength of its relationship to the Jewish community.

To those who look for evidence, I say consider the following:

- The qualities that are so often identified with Beth Israel are closely related to elements in the Jewish tradition: the spirit of "tsedakah" or charity that founded the hospital and has done so much to support it over the years; the striving for excellence in scholarship; the fact that our doors have always been open to all who may enter; the emphasis on warmth and thoughtful personal care.

- Then there is the relationship between Beth Israel Hospital and other Jewish agencies in the community. As many of you know, Beth Israel has a major commitment toward the health needs of the elderly. Just in the last year we have developed programs to help care for the aged in conjunction with Brookline-Brighton-Newton Jewish Community Center, Jewish Community Housing for the Elderly, and other organizations for senior citizens. We have important ties with the Hebrew Rehabilitation Center for the Aged, and our advances in gerontology are closely related to that cooperative relationship. Members of our staff also regularly visit New England Sinai Hospital. We work closely with the Jewish Family and Children's Service on a variety of programs, and continue to provide free medical care to new Russian immigrants and Israeli students.

- Beth Israel Hospital is a part of the community, not just a participant in it. Many members of the staff, employees, volunteers, trustees, and patients are active in other areas of the community.

- Finally, there is the unique and continuing role Beth Israel has played in the history of Combined Jewish Philanthropies.

One might ask why anyone should care about Beth Israel's role in the community. After all, both the hospital and the community have changed profoundly from the days when there was no hospital that would treat a Jew with dignity and familiar comfort, no place where a Jewish doctor could practice. Relatively few patients still want kosher food, and few speak only Yiddish. And the Jewish community of Boston, once concentrated in the city, is now dispersed.

But despite all of these changes, dramatic as they are, there endures a strong bond between the community and the hospital. It is based not on geography but on mutual interest and identification. The fact is that Beth Israel always will be an integral part of the Jewish community of Boston. The community is more diverse than it ever was, and the hospital's role is more diverse, as well.

But what that means is that there are more opportunities for joint effort than ever before, and the sense of identity and purpose that made Beth Israel possible in the first place will be even more important to us in the future.

We are in this together—the hospital, the community, and all of us as individuals—and we must all move forward together as we have since the beginning.

That was the strength of our yesterday, and it will be the strength of our tomorrow. □

When you are thinking about sending a telegram, flowers, or candy, why not send the thought that really counts—a special gift to Beth Israel Hospital in honor or in memory of someone you wish to remember.

Your gift of five dollars or more may be designated to a specific hospital purpose such as heart research or the medical library, or it may be unrestricted. Those you wish to honor, or their families, will receive your warm wishes through a personal acknowledgement from Beth Israel of your gift in their names. And, the Hospital's work of health care will be enhanced.

Please complete the reverse side of this note and forward it to the development division of Beth Israel Hospital on the next occasion when you want your thoughts to be with someone. Attached to this note is a prepaid, self-addressed envelope for your mailing convenience.

Thank you.

Annual Meeting

The principal address, a look to the future, was presented by Eugene Braunwald, MD, physician-in-chief of the recently consolidated academic departments of medicine at Beth Israel and Brigham and Women's Hospital. Dr. Braunwald called for increased cooperation among medical institutions in the face of declining resources (see related article, page 3).

Norman B. Leventhal, chairman of the board of trustees, spoke about Beth Israel's ties to the Jewish community (see related article, page 8). "The strength of the hospital is inseparable from the strength of its relationship to the Jewish community," he said. "Beth Israel is a part of the community, not just a participant in it."

On behalf of the Women's Auxiliary, president Miriam Dane presented a check for $180,000 to the hospital which Auxilians raised toward the purchase of a CT scanner. Evan Weston, president of the Men's Associates, reviewed the group's work for the year and presented its contribution which will go toward the planned Anna and Samuel Pinanski Video Production Center at Beth Israel Hospital.

Named honorary trustees for life, in recognition of their loyal and devoted service as trustees, were Alexander S. Beal, David Casty, Arnold R. Cutler, Frances Freedman, Sumner M. Gerstein, Anna Ullian, Justin L. Wyner, and Abraham Zaleznik. (Mr. Gerstein died on December 7, less than one month after being named an honorary trustee.) Ten new members were elected to the board of trustees (see related article, page 10).

The meeting honored physicians for their long years of service to the hospital. Celebrating 25 years as members of the medical staff were: Harold M. Bargar, MD; Bernard A. Berman, MD; Sidney Brodie, MD; Ernest P. Davidow, MD; Howard H. Hiatt, MD; John P. Hubbell, Jr., MD; Melvin I. Klayman, MD; Eliot Landsman, MD; Edward T. O'Hara, MD; Julian L. Pearlman, MD; Philip N. Richmond, OD; Chester B. Rosoff, MD; Ben Selling, MD; William B. Sperling, DPM; Albert M. Starr, MD; Olga S. Wermer, MD; Richard Wolff, MD; and Edward L. Zarsky, MD. 30 years: Norman L. Berezin, DDS; Howard A. Blazar, MD; Elliott Bresnick, MD; Bernard S. Chaikin, DMD; Albert Cohen, MD; Robert F. Dine, MD; R. Harlow Hermanson, MD; Sumner H. Hoffman, MD; Harold Karlin, MD; Joseph D. Karras, MD; S. Charles Kasdon, MD; Irving L. Pavlo, MD; Irving Saffran, MD; Robert Shapiro, MD; Lester H. Tobin, MD; Albert E. Wiener, MD; and Bertram M. Winer, MD. 35 years: Harold D. Levine, MD. 40 years: Louis S. Chase, MD; Jack D. Cohen, MD; J. Charles Drooker, MD; Samuel J. Kowal, MD; Robert H. Talkov, MD; and David Weintraub, MD; 45 years: Edward Budnitz, MD, and Charles Liberman, MD. 50 years: David Ayman, MD; George Kahn, MD; Herbert Margolis, DMD.

Mitchell T. Rabkin, MD, president of Beth Israel, reported on highlights of the year and revealed plans for growth and modernization in the years ahead (see related article, page 6). □

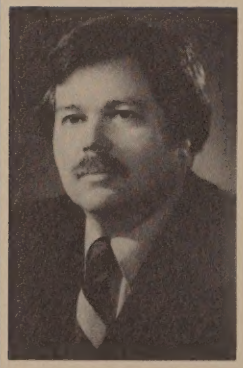
Evan Weston, president of Beth Israel's Men's Associates, gave the group's annual report.

New Trustees of Beth Israel Hospital

The Beth Israel Hospital Association elected the following ten new members to its board of trustees at the 65th Annual Meeting.

Allan S. Bufferd served on the finance committee at Beth Israel before being named a trustee. He is assistant treasurer and recording secretary at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He holds bachelor, master, and doctor of science degrees in engineering from MIT and a doctor of jurisprudence degree from Suffolk University. Bufferd is a member of the boards of directors of the License Royalty Corporation, Surface Treatment Technologies, and Cambridge Materials Associates. He has also participated in community organizations such as Temple Emanuel and the school board in Newton and the MIT Alumni Association. He and his wife Rhea live in Newton with their children Lauren, 20, and Steven, 17.

Theodora L. Feldberg is past president of the Women's Auxiliary at Beth Israel. She has also volunteered her time for the National Development Fund at Wellesley College, her alma mater, and was vice president of the Friends of Dartmouth Library. She is an administrator in Harvard Medical School's resource/development office. A resident of Wellesley, she is married to Stanley H. Feldberg, past chairman of Beth Israel's board of trustees. Her son Mark, 29, lives in Los Angeles and daughter Margery, 27, in New York.



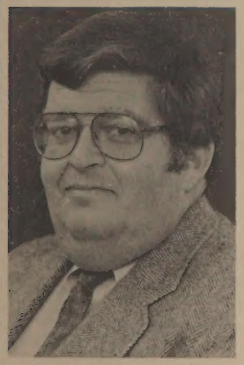
Gerald Kraft, who previously served on Beth Israel's finance committee and budget subcommittee, is president of the economic and engineering firm, Charles River Associates. He holds a bachelor of arts degree from Wayne State University and a master of arts degree from Harvard University. He has been active in community organizations including the Transportation Research Forum, the Maritime Transportation Research Board, the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and the Rotary Club. He and his wife Sandra live in Weston and children Michael, 21, and Lynn, 18, are college students.

Robert Sage, a hotel executive, has participated in a variety of community activities. He is a trustee of Colby College, his alma mater, and is past chairman of the Alumni Association. He also is past president of Parker Hill Medical Center and was a director of the Harvard Community Health Plan and vice president of the Hebrew Rehabilitation Center. He has been active in professional organizations as president of the Greater Boston Hotel-Motel Association, the Massachusetts Hotel-Motor Inn Association and the New England Innkeepers, as director of the American Hotel-Motel Association, and as vice president of the Greater Boston Convention and Tourist Bureau. He and his wife Phyllis, Newton residents, are parents of William, 27, Jane, 21, and Marjorie B. Muroff who lives in Hewlett, New York.

Myron B. Fiering is a professor of engineering and applied mathematics at Harvard University where he received degrees of bachelor of arts, master of science, and doctor of philosophy. A consultant to the water resource and environmental agencies of the federal government and to private engineering firms, he is also a principal of Meta Systems Inc. and a senior fellow at Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute. In the community, he has served on the board at Hebrew College and has chaired drives for Combined Jewish Philanthropies at Harvard and in Sudbury, where he lives with his wife Jill and children Suzanne, 18, and Lisa, 15.

Eugene M. Freedman, who holds a master of science degree in economics from Columbia University, is a vice chairman at Coopers & Lybrand, certified public accountants. Active in the Boston community, he is chairman of the board and director of the New England Legal Foundation, director and member of the executive committee of the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce and of the Boston Municipal Research Bureau. He supports the arts as a trustee of the Boston Opera Association, the Metropolitan Center, and the Institute of Contemporary Art. He has also been a trustee of the Combined Jewish Philanthropies. The government has called upon his expertise to serve on the governor's Management Task Force and as a director of the mayor's Office of Cultural Affairs. He lives in Weston with his wife Myrna and children Deborah, 17, Richard, 13, and Elizabeth, 3.

Edward Guzovsky was a member of the buildings and grounds committee at Beth Israel before becoming a trustee. An electrical contractor with degrees in engineering and law from Northeastern University, he is president of his own firm. He has been active with the Combined Jewish Philanthropies, and he has served as a trustee of Hebrew College, a corporator of Milton hospital, a director at Temple Beth Shalom, and president of a B'nai B'rith lodge. He and his wife Barbara live in Milton and are parents of Joseph, 25, Pamela, 23, and Daniel, 20.



Alan M. Schwartz has been active at Beth Israel before becoming a trustee. He is a past president of the Men's Associates and was a member of the development and public relations committees. He has also served the community as a committee chairman and associate treasurer of Combined Jewish Philanthropies, as president of Boston Men's ORT Council, and as a member of the board at Temple Beth Avodah, the Jewish Community Centers, and Pine Brook Country Club. He is president of the Bay State Packaging Corporation and holds a bachelor of science in business administration from Babson College. He and his wife Brenda live in Newton with their children Sandra, 15, and Neil, 12.

Sidney Shuman is general manager and treasurer of his own construction company and has been active in a variety of professional and community organizations. Before being elected a trustee, he was a member of the hospital's buildings and grounds committee. He has been president of the Associated General Contractors of Massachusetts and the Massachusetts Building Congress as well as participating in many committees in those organizations and in the American Arbitration Association, the Boston Cement Masons, and the Massachusetts Construction Industry Council and Board. In addition, he has chaired several committees at Temple Mishkan Tefila, and for 14 years he served on the mayor's Advisory Committee for the city of Newton where he lives. He and his wife Barbara are parents of Barnette, 30, and Louis, 29.

Stephen M. Weiner, a graduate of Harvard University (AB) and Yale University (LLB), is director of the Center for Law and Health Sciences and an associate professor of law at Boston University. He was chairman of the Massachusetts Rate Setting Commission (1972-1978) and a special assistant to the governor (1971-1974). In addition, he has been active in the Metropolitan Cultural Association and currently serves as a trustee of Temple Emanuel in Newton and the Solomon Schechter Day School. He lives in Newton with his wife Roslyn and children Jeremiah, 10, Benjamin, 7, Miriam, 5, and Isaac,2.

Dyslexia research funded. At the annual meeting of the Orton Society in October, William Underwood Co. announced a $100,000 grant to fund a study into the neurological foundation of dyslexia in a laboratory to be established in the Dana Research Building. Dr. Drake Duane, left, president of the Orton Society, congratulates Beth Israel neurologist Dr. Albert Galaburda, who will direct the study. Also present at the announcement were, left to right, James D. Wells, president of Underwood, Dr. Mitchell T. Rabkin, president of Beth Israel, Dr. Daniel C. Tosteson, dean of Harvard Medical School, and Dr. Norman Geschwind, neurologist-in-chief of Beth Israel, who will supervise the laboratory. □

Longtime advisor. Theresa Whitman, shown at the annual meeting and brunch, was thanked for her assistance to the chairmen of the 1980 meeting.

A special tribute at the September meeting of the board of trustees held at the downtown Harvard Club honored Mrs. Whitman for over five decades of leadership at Beth Israel. A slide show illustrated that the story of Mrs. Whitman's involvement at the hospital and the growth and flowering of the Women's Auxiliary were one and the same. In addition to holding key roles in fundraising efforts for the hospital since 1921, Mrs. Whitman was elected to the board of trustees in 1936 and in 1958 was the first woman to be named an honorary trustee. Seven generations of her family "have been privileged to enlist their service in betterment," she said. □

Honored for Long Service

George Kahn, MD, David Ayman, MD, and Herbert Margolis, DDS, were each recognized at the annual meeting for 50 years of service to Beth Israel Hospital.

Dr. Kahn, a pediatrician, joined the staff in 1928 when the hospital opened on Brookline Avenue. Now fully retired, Dr. Kahn served with the Boston and then the Brookline Departments of Health for 25 years after retiring from his pediatric practice. Dr. Kahn is a 1922 graduate of Harvard Medical School who received training in pediatrics at Boston City Hospital and the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania.

His wife, Ida Mae, is an active member of the Women's Auxiliary, and his nephew, Abbott Kahn, is involved in the Men's Associates, continuing the family's interest in Beth Israel.

Dr. Ayman can still be found seeing his patients at Beth Israel almost every day. The 1926 graduate of Harvard Medical School continues to practice as a cardiologist in greater Boston. He has been a member of the medical staff since he founded the outpatient hypertension clinic in 1929.

"BI has really advanced to a scientific institution from the early days when it was just a hospital for patients," he says. His wife, Eleanor, has supported the hospital as a life member of the Women's Auxiliary.

Dr. Margolis, a retired orthodontist, was an attending dentist in Beth Israel's dental clinic. He was head of orthodontics at the Boston University School of Graduate Dentistry (1960 to 1968) and at the Tufts University Graduate School of Dentistry (1945 to 1960). He graduated from the Harvard Dental School in 1921. His wife, Annette, is a life member of the Women's Auxiliary. □

Mother and son trustees. For the first time, two generations of a family are serving as members of the board of trustees at the same time. Shown above talking to Margot Kruskall, MD, director of the Schwartz Blood Bank, are Hannah Schwartz, elected in 1979, and son Alan Schwartz, a new trustee, who are continuing their family's long tradition of service to Beth Israel. Hannah's father-in-law, Nathan, served as a trustee (1955-1967) as did brother-in-law Joseph (1967-1978), and her grandmother was one of the pioneers in the Women's Auxiliary.

Hannah Schwartz, who started volunteering at Beth Israel when she was 15 years old, is a past president of the Women's Auxiliary in which she remains active. Alan Schwartz is a past president of the Men's Associates.

In addition to their gifts of service, the family has dedicated the Nathan and Ida Schwartz Blood Bank located on the third floor at the joining of the Feldberg, Stoneman, and Gryzmish Buildings. □

Where There's A Will...

Do you have a will? Surprisingly, seven out of ten people in the United States die without one.

"It's really tragic when someone dies without a will," says Hugh F. Colliton, III, the new director of planned giving at Beth Israel. "Their assets are then distributed by the state in a manner that may be contrary to their wishes."

Without a will you lose control. The state makes the distribution of your property and money according to state law, regardless of what your family may prefer, which institutions you want to support, and what makes tax sense. The court may even appoint a legal guardian for minor children and will name an executor for the will arbitrarily, if you haven't planned ahead.

You can prevent this. But many people don't like to think about death, so they put off writing a will.

Others are not aware of how much their estate is worth. They think that they don't own enough even to bother with a will. Yet, with the soaring price of housing, expanded retirement and insurance benefits, and general inflation, most people have more assets than they realize. By not having a will, people who are just of average or comfortable means create problems for their heirs. Estate planning is not only for wealthy people.

Some people are afraid lawyers will charge too much to write a will, says Colliton, and put off doing it for that reason. But many lawyers charge only modest fees which they will usually discuss in advance.

"A basic part of any financial planning is estate planning," says Colliton, who came to BI from public broadcasting station WGBH after years of experience as a stockbroker. "Leaving money to charity has tremendous estate-tax advantages because the bequest is deducted from the taxable estate." Colliton leads the organized planned giving program at Beth Israel. While the hospital has often received bequests in the past, no professional has been available to assist people in their planning.

"What better way to serve the community than to include Beth Israel as one of the charitable beneficiaries of your estate," he says. Sometimes, Colliton points out, if the named beneficiaries die before the person for whom they are beneficiaries, the entire estate will go to the state. By naming Beth Israel as a contingent beneficiary, you can ensure that if the primary beneficiary is unable to receive the inheritance, Beth Israel as the contingent beneficiary receives the funds, rather than the state.

"The funds raised in the planned giving program will supplement other funds to help the hospital carry out its never-ending building and remodelling program," Colliton says. Construction of the new Dana Research Building has just begun, for example, and plans are well underway for a new, expanded emergency unit and a new labor and delivery suite.

There are many ways to provide for people and charities that are important to you. You may leave a specific amount, a percentage of your estate, or you may set up a trust. You can make a bequest of personal or real property. Bequests can be given as unrestricted, or designated for specific research, education, or facilities.

For help in planning your bequest or for more information, please contact Hugh Colliton, development division, 735-3600. □

"THE PROJECT" launched. A ceremony marking the start of construction for the new Dana Research Building was held on December 17. Four stories will be added to the Slosberg-Landay Building to create the Charles A. Dana Research Institute which will provide additional space for Harvard's Thorndike Laboratories at Beth Israel and biomedical research in the departments of medicine, surgery, obstetrics/gynecology, orthopedics, anesthesia, neurology, radiology, and pathology. □

BI in the News

Beth Israel Hospital continues to be a frequent source of news for the general press.

Advances in medicine published regularly in professional journals by Beth Israel staff members are translated into lay language for the general public by reporters from both print and broadcast media. Recently, for example, a new treatment for sickle-cell anemia published in the New England Journal of Medicine gained wide exposure. The study, headed by Robert Rosa, MD, at Beth Israel and Franklin Bunn, MD, at Brigham and Women's Hospital, was covered in the Boston Globe, the Herald American, the Associated Press, United Press International, and newspapers throughout the country. Local radio and television stations as well as CBS radio network, Mutual Black Radio network, WRC, WAMU, and WTOL (Washington, DC), WORL (Orlando), and Physician's Radio Network (New York) also reported the research news.

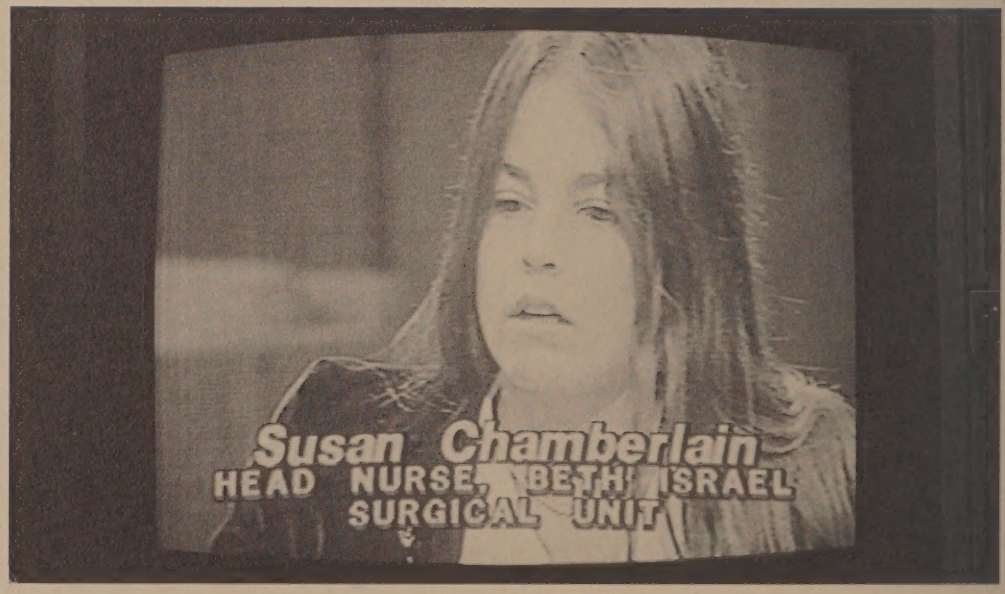
The broadcast media often call upon the expertise of Beth Israel staff for various television shows on health care topics. During the year, BI staff members have been seen on Channel 7's "Weekday," "At Noon," "David Brudnoy," and "Peoplescope"; Channel 5's "Good Day" and "Housecall"; Channel 4's "People Are Talking" and its predecessors, "The Sharon King Show" and "Moneysense"; and Channel 38's "Forum 38."

Press releases reporting the many accomplishments of employees are used by local newspapers in their hometowns. In other local coverage, the Jewish Times and the Jewish Advocate give considerable attention to general news at Beth Israel.

Some recent highlights of news stories from Beth Israel are shown.

Jane Pauley asks a question after Robert Bazell, NBC science correspondent, center, interviewed Dr. Jeffrey Flier on the Today show when his obesity research was published in the New England Journal of Medicine.
Dr. Flier also appeared the same day on Frank Field's WNBC medical news show in New York and reports of his work aired locally on Channels 2, 4, 5, and 7.

Coverage of the story in the broadcast media also included interviews with Dr. Flier on WEEI (Boston), WCBS, WNBC, WRKO, WOR (New York), KABC (Los Angeles), and National Public Radio ("All Things Considered").



Susan Chamberlain, RN, appeared on Channel 5's "Sunday Open House" program on nursing while Kathy Carr, RN, and Anna Yoder, RN, participated from the audience. Earlier in the year, social worker Susan Levin and obstetrician/gynecologist Dr. Wayne Cohen were invited to speak about fathers and childbirth on the same show.

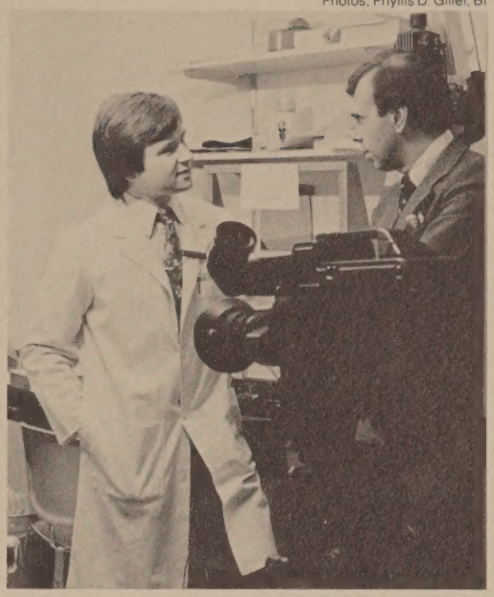
Childbirth at Beth Israel is featured in Dr. Timothy Johnson's special, "Every Ten Seconds" on WCVB-TV, Channel 5. The documentary begins with a parent education class and a birth videotaped at the hospital.



Neurologist Dr. Albert Galaburda, left, talked to Dr. Jim Wasco of WBZ-TV's "Evening Magazine" about his research on the neurological foundations of dyslexia. The medical segments featuring Dr. Wasco on the Channel 4 show are syndicated in 105 cities. The announcement of a laboratory to investigate the anatomical causes of dyslexia was also covered by the Boston Globe, the Herald American, and several other local newspapers, Channels 2, 5, and 7, US News and World Report, and National Public Radio.

During the past year, Dr. Wasco has filmed several stories at Beth Israel. Recently he interviewed Dr. Jeffrey Flier about his research on obesity and reported on the Back Pain School. Earlier in the year, "Evening Magazine" covered a kidney transplant and the Sleep Unit.

Long after the immediate news reports of a scientific study published in a medical journal, the story may continue to appear. In February 1980, the research published by Dr. Richard Spark in the Journal of the American Medical Association on endocrine causes of sexual impotence attracted a great deal of attention in print and electronic media. Almost a year later, the story continued to be featured in such large-circulation publications as Parents Magazine, Mademoiselle, Good Housekeeping, Woman's Day, and a flight magazine. It also appeared in a nationally-syndicated health column written by Dr. Timothy Johnson.
